Description

This house is original from the SXVII th C.

It is the classic Sevillian house with arcaded courtyard with marble Corinthian columns surrounding the patio. Upstairs balconies separated by pilasters.

The house is located nearby churches and palaces (Pilatos, Mañara…). Here you hear the bells of the churches, the doves cooing and water of the fountain.

The house is large, about 1,200 sq m. It has three floors that rotate around a central courtyard and two other courtyards that give more light and aerated.

It is renovated and in good condition, including central heating.

It has a large roof terrace overlooking different streets from which you can enjoy beautiful set of roof of the adjoining houses and bullrushes and church domes …

The entrance is quite discrete, rather small in proportion to the size of the house.
